Was recently in Bergen Norway as part of the FQXi conference Setting Time Aright.. (I didn't know it had gone awry...). Since Norway seems to be one of the world's most expensive travel destinations, I figured I would take full advantage of the hotel breakfast, skip lunch, and have dinner at a really good restaurant---most restaurants in town are nearly as expensive as a really good one anyway.

Mange fnyste av tanken på å ta eit grantre inn i stova da skikken kom til Noreg på slutten av 1800-talet, men raskt spreidde han seg og vart populær. Dette ølet er inspirert av det same. Her møter du nåletreet i flytande form og den gode julestemninga sprer seg til heile kroppen. Du grøne glitrande er eit orginalt juleøl som kan virka sært ved fyrste dråpe, men som fort kan bli ein ...

Behind the restaurant is Hanne's garden. The rhubarb is standing tall and containers are dense with herbs. A truck has just delivered the catch of the day. Small organic farms from nearby deliver produce, hams from Landas, cheese from Underdal, mushrooms and berries from local foragers. If it's not Norwegian, it's not served at Pa Hoyden.

I simply love it when you stumble upon a restaurant that is far far away from the tourist traps but still easily accessible that ALSO ends up being a superb culinary experience. About a week ago Mr. LTB and I stumbled upon Hanne på Høyden in Bergen, and decided it was too good a gem not to share.. Located in a building heaving under the weight of good culinary traditions (this was where ...
